Pulp Wages Rocket 87%

Wages in the Canadian pulp and paper industry have risen 87 per cent since 1969 and are 16 per cent above those paid in the United States, according to a report released in Vancouver today.

The report by the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, released at the start of its annual convention, showed average hourly mill wages at $6.83 in Canada compared with $5.89 in the U.S.

"Since this is not justified on the basis of productivity, it represents a substantial disadvantage for Canadian pulp and paper manufacturers, competing both at home and around the world," the association said.

In 1969, wages in the two countries were about even, $3.66 per hour in Canada and $3.67 in the United States.

Since then, Canadian wages have gone up 87 per cent while U.S. wages were going up 60 per cent. The Canadian association said unless the wage gap is corrected, Canadian mills may find it difficult to attract capital to reinvest in job-creating expansion programs.

The report showed that despite heavy U.S. investment in the industry, Canadians continue to control about 60 per cent of production.

Vander Zalm said hundreds of industries are moving to the U.S. and shipping their products back to B.C.

"Not only can't we compete abroad but we can't sell our products at home."

He said a shipment of lumber recently came into B.C. from Finland at a cheaper price than it could be manufactured here. Plywood is also being shipped in from the U.S.

TOKYO (UPI) - Conservative Prime Minister Takeo Miki reorganized his cabinet today to restore political sta-Lockheed payoff scandal.

The formation of Miki's new cabinet was not expected to have any effect on his basic pro-Western foreign policy. The 69-year-old statesman retained key eabinet min-isters, including deputy pre-mier Takeo Fukuda and finance minister Masayoshi Ohira, who have been leading drives to oust Miki from power.

Miki apparently decided to keep them in his cabinet to seek their co-operation in putting an end to the political turmoil which resulted from the $12 million scandal.

Veteran conservative law maker Zentaro Kosaka was named foreign minister to succeed Kichi Miyazawa.

Kosaka was foreign .minister more than 10 years ago. Miki's opponents in the ruling Liberal democratic party have been calling for his resignation, claiming he has been neglecting state affairs for the sake of getting to the bottom of the scandal. The bribery case has already led to the indictment of Miki's predecessor, Kakuei Tanaka, for allegedly receiving $1.66 million from Lock-cabinet, the first since Miki assumed power in late 1974, is widely regarded as a temporary truce between the prime minister and forces opposed to him within the party.

Community Plan in Name Only

are being thwarted in their attempts and submit it to the Capital Regional to retain some control over Board. Even more galling to comneighborhood development through inflexible bureaucratic structures. Most of the blame lies with a complacent municipal structure that has known few challenges to its authority since time immemorial. Now the city is changing. People see their neighborhoods bulldozed and blitzed as concrete and glass monoliths cast shadows over familiar turf. The people in these neighborhoods even found it difficult to get on the voters' list to register their concern - thanks to once-intractable attitudes at city-hall.

Another example of how the structure defeats people concerns the implementation of official community plans. In November 1974 the Greater Victoria area adopted an official regional plan. Core municipalities were given notice that individual community plans must be submitted by November, 1976. Victoria's plan was just completed within the last six weeks. Only in the last three weeks have various community associations been able to peruse the document. On ment since 1956. In 1970 it started for-Oct. 12 one public hearing will be held on the plan, one public hearing on a plan that may determine the future of local communities until the turn of the Victoria West. > other words, local neighborhoods will have little say in what happens to their habitat. Even the official community plan as it now stands is devoid of detail, offering only vacuous platitudes. An example 'The basic objective of a plan for Victoria should be to set forth a development strategy that both meets the community's responsibilities towards growth while maintaining a reasonable quality of life for its inhabitants." With this kind of preordained verbal latitude council could zone James Bay heavy industrial without a blink or a wink. It is obvious that communities have no protection from amendments or even changes in direction if council so desires, given this fuzzy language of motherhood.

> The city has had a planning departmulating plans for the future with the Rockland study. That was followed in 1973 with studies on James Bay and so longwinded the very people who will be most affected have only a few weeks to comment on the future of their own neighborhoods. Community associations should get at least six months to peruse the future shape of their areas, not to mention a number of head-to-head sessions with council over revisions.

Mayor Young has said that the public sees only the "tag end of the process" and suggested that when developers submit applications to city hall they should show proof that they have already submitted their proposals to the community concerned. This is admirable thinking, but it is only "thinking," as the situation with the official community plan il-

Victorians have a right to expect more forethought from their elected representatives. For too long municipal buréaucracies have doddered along to the tick tock of some internal clock. The city's planning department deserves a kick in the pants for not completing the official community plan in time for all and sundry to examine it carefully. And council deserves an equally wellplaced boot for not pushing the planning department to an early deadline.

But this latest type seems to be rather more virulently destructive. Last month, Canadians read reports of a speech to shareholders by the president of Atco Industries Ltd., the self-proclaimed world's largest manufacturer of portable housing.

Ron Southern, apparently equating success in the trailer business with intelligence, denounced the federal government in scabrous terms usually found only in the lesser kinds of Soviet propaganda, say, when the Russian state wishes to single out for particular denunciation a lesser dissident writer or activist.

Atco's president minced no words. He called the federal government a "national parasitical monster." also a "ravenous monster" with and "in-

He went on, leaving no doubts at all about his feelings about government in general: "Like any parasite it takes its food — freedoms, monies, people, power - and converts them into a slothful hulk . .

So from now on, Atco is going to concentrate on expanding in the land of the free and home of the brave. Reynolds pledged his support to the retaliatory legislation. "Most Candians would support any American moves to straighten out our government," he said.

Bill C-58 is an odious statute, but Reynolds is talking rubbish. We're all in favor of hands-across-the-border stuff, but if the honorable member want to make a case against Canadian legislation, the place to do it is in Canada, speaking to Canadians.

Love it or leave it. My country right or wrong. These are as simpleminded as the public statements of men such as Ron Southern and John Reynolds. But if their convictions have been accurately represented to the public, then let us hope both men soon pack their bags and move out since they find Canada such an intolerable place.

The postal service will use the emergency aid to help meet last year's deficit and pay some of its current bills, with the hope that the bail-out will make it easier to borrow enough on private captial markets to see it through Congress, with strong backing from then-president Richard M. Nixon, created the postal service in 1970 as a publiclyowned corporation — with independent borrowing power — that was to use sound business practices to pay its own way. It replaced the patronage-ridden U.S. post office department, a traditional dumping ground for political friends. It was a great idea, on paper," notes a there are a variety of answers provided by the management of the postal service, the employee unions, and the politicians. But certain basic problems now are agreed upon by practically all the experts who have studied the system.

Foremost among them is the fact that Americans are using the mails less and less these days and postal authorities predict the trend will likely continue. In turn, the postal service says it must raise rates or receive larger subsidies because of the lost business in order to meet

In addition to this push-pull spiral, the postal service blames inflation, which raised its fuel, building and equipment expenses during the recent recession. It points the finger at the telephone and other communications technology, such as computers, which have decreased business' use of the mails.

The bail-out bill in the compromise version agreed to by the senate and house of representatives, rejected a proposal to return the mails to the old system of direct congressional control. The original house version called for re-establishing the old post office department.

Some politicians on Capitol Hill and such conservative members of the Ford cabinet as Treasury Secretary William Simon have begun questioning the postal service's monopoly on first class mail. But there are fears that private firms would service only large urban areas, "skimming off" the most lucrative business and leaving the postal service to operate money-losing routes in rural areas.

Making the Man the Issue

NEW YORK - Gerald Ford's campaign may be off to a good start in the attempt to make Jimmy Carter rather than the record of the Nixon-Ford administrations "the issue" of the 1976 campaign. Now that Carter's campaign is officially under way, he may well be able to carry the fight to Ford.

But the Democratic nominee's sudden shift in emphasis from curing unemployment to curbing inflation looked like nothing so much as a retreat from the gunp fire of Republican charges, beginning a the Kansas City convention, against "big-spending Democrats."

The Carter shift not only blurred the most clear-cut issue the Democrats have, and at a time when a third consecutive onthly increase in unemployment  $7.9 \ \mathrm{per} \ \mathrm{cent} - \mathrm{was} \ \mathrm{being} \ \mathrm{announced} \ \mathrm{by} \ \mathrm{a}$  Ford administration that had hoped the rate would decline during the campaign.

Four More Years

Carter's changed emphasis also gave the Republicans new cause to press their campaign against him as a man who constantly alters or abscures his positions. Coming just before Labor Day and just after George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, had embraced him, Carter's apparent elevation of inflation over unemployment among his priorities must unsettled some important elements of his support.

Perhaps even more importantly, his effort to avoid the "big label, gave some plausibility to the Ford attempt to make the main issue the speculative question of whether Carter is fit to be president, when the main issue really is, or ought to be, whether the actual record of the Nixon administration for six years and the Ford administration for two warrants another four years of Republican government. And the highest levels of unemployment since the Depression surely are one of the major facts of

It is true that the "big spender" issue is potent. But it's not likely that any number of disclaimers and shifts of stance by Carter will cause Ford or his running mate, Robert Dole, to abandon the charge. Nor will mere denials by Carter be sufcounted on to drive home two themes time and again during the coming campaign. They will paint Carter and the Democrats as "big spenders" who will bleed the taxclaim that Carter and the Democrats will reduce the nation's military power, endangering its security and risking war. Carter, personally, will be continually denounced as an inexperienced candidate who neither knows nor will say where he Gerald Ford will remain ostentatiously in the White House, acting presidential and experienced, holding news conferences in free prime time and wearing his der-in-chief's hat at every or

This has a hidden advantage — it leaves most of the overt campaigning to the energetic Dole, who will thus get far more attention in the press than his Democratic opposite number, Walter Mondale. That already is happening. With his party's nomination at last in hand, Ford may even seem more like a real incumbent to many voters. To some degree, even if he is unelected and presit only by the hand of Richard Nixon, helis bound to benefit from the well-known reluctance of Americans to "vote against the president" and perhaps from a factor that benefitted Lyndon Johnson in 1964 — a feeling that it would be "unfair" to deprive him of a term of his own.

Desire for Change

All that adds up to a strong Republican campaign and a close election, polls or no polls. But there is one major problem for the Republicans and one major advantage. for the Democrats, and it is upon these, not on fending off predictable Republican charges, that Jimmy Carter can most profitably concentrate.

The Republican problem is a dismal record in office — from the corruption of Watergate and the resignation of Spiro Agnew to the worst recession since the the biggest budget deficits, the highest rates of unemployment, the gross mismanagement of food programs and a laundry list of other failures.

The Democratic advantage is the widespread desire for change not just any kind of change, but rational, constructive, clearly-stated ideas for improved economic and social justice and renewed political stability. Jimmy Carter's best defence against any offense is to demonstrate that Gerald Ford has given no one reason to believe he has such ideas, while making it clear that the Democrats

Political Farce

The political situation in Canada is confusing to say the least. One might almost scribe it as farcical.

The Liberals won a majority in the last election by refusing to introduce wage and price controls which was part the platform of the Conservatives. One year after taking office the Liberals introduce price and wage controls with the emphasis on wages and very little atten-tion to profits. For instance the banks Bell Telephone and other major Canadian companies have announced increased profits. The real estate firms and financial institutions are also showing increased profits and, of course, the incomes of the professional classes increase and only a 10 per cent surcharge has been imposed by the federal government. The Gallup poll shows a sharp decline in the popularity of the Liberals and an increase in the Conservative and one hears that this trend is based not only on the price and wage controls but on the issue of capital punishment and bilingualism. However I would point out that the leaders of the Conservatives voted in favor of both these projects. Joe Clark and Stanfield are both abolitionists and infavor of the bill which introduced bilingualism. I do not recall that either of these problems was hotly contested at the recent Conservative convention when Joe

Clark was elected leader. Both the Liberals and Conservatives do no propose any radical changes in our economic structure and both these parties support the retention of the Senate In view of the above it appears to me that we are experiencing another phase of . the charade to which we are exposed from time to time. However there appears to be little difference between the two parites on major issues as they both support the status quo of our economic structure in the chartered banks and other powerful financial institutions. Still the replaced Trudeau tomorrow there would not be one iota of change for the average citizen.—M. P. B. Wrixon, 1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

Reactionary

I was as much amused as angered to see the government of Canada's full-page ad for the Anti-Inflation Board in the Thursday and Friday papers. Such a blatant piece of publicly-financed propaganda I have not encountered since the days of the Ask Your Provincial Government series, which if the reader will remember, was a cheap attempt at political slickness commissioned by the W.A.C. Bennett regime when it was under heavy opposition attack. The Liberal government's AIB ad campaign is of course a good deal more sophisticated than the crude Socred hucksterism, but its principle and intent are the same. It seeks to justify a controversial program at public expense. In the guise of an objective report, the adver-tisment attacks all those opposed to the wage control program as irrational, irresponsible, and economically subversive It is no accident that the Liberal ad campaign coincides with labor's final prepara tions for the national day of protest on Oct.

14, the campaign is obviously intended to steal the wind from labor's sails. Whatever the merits of the AIB, the government of our country is betraying its obligation to fairness in using public funds to attack its political opponents. The Liberal government, characteristically, is obscuring the distinction between party olitics and the execution of government It is using the taxpayers' money as an instrument of political self-perpetration.

I find one small consolation in all of It seems apparent that the use of public funds for propaganda is a sign of political feebleness. Such certainly was the case in 1972 with Social Credit. Let us hope that the reactionary Liberals' political enfeeblement continues. - B. A. Webb, Victoria.

What Else?

The announcement by provincial Finance Minister Evan Wolfe that he approves of the latest onesided amendme to the federal anti-inflation program hardly seems necessary. What other reaction could possibly be expected from a cabinet minister who is the owner of a Lower Mainland car dealership?

Mr. Wolfe and the owner of any other business should not only approve of, but should be absolutely delighted with a program which will limit future wage in creases of their employees to six per cent a year while allowing prices and profits to go virtually unchecked — Rolled Back.

AS FOR one-time troubador and Joan's longtime friend Bob Dylan, he's occupied these days supervising construction of this $2 million home above the cliffs of Malibu, Calif. Dozens of artisans and craftsmen have worked several years to give it a "folksy, hand-crafted appearance." ## Getting It All Together

Blissfully unaware of what lay ahead and reasonably content with the state of things on the summer's last long holiday weekend, we stopped in at the American Psychological Association's 84th annual convention — and stumbled into the minefield of problems occupying the 15,000 psychologists in attendance.

Some we didn't know existed ("Sex Differences in Personal Space Invasion at a plain Shopping Mall;" or "Human Ecology: Dreams, Our Most Neglected Natural Resource"). Others we are aware of all too well: ("Women's Reactions to Population Density Levels in Grocery Stores," a weekly experience at the neighborhood

The idea that everyone should be an open, sensitive, loving person — fully potentialized. That sounds almost sarcastic, and I don't mean that way. I'm not knocking it. "Now, what would a reporter be in-

In the exhibits section, instrumentation provided an electronic wonderland of biofeedback devices. TV monitors to watch test subjects, computers, and in-struments to check everything from heart beat to sweating. But the most popular was an exhibit of a health massager. It was a round foam pillow to ease tension in feet, back legs, face and arms.

BIOLOGISTS SPEAK OUT

Fraser, Columbia Dam Schemes Damned

Two bioligists, both formerly with the fish and wildlife the McGregor, the proposed dam would also change the branch, have assumed differing stands in opposition to dambuilding plans in two areas of British Columbia.

Patrick Martin of Telkwa, now a commercial fisherman, voiced his concern over B.C. Hydro's grandiose scheme for a series of dams in tributaries of the Fraser River in a letter to Western Fisheries magazine.

And, Al Acara of Victoria, who now heads up an environmental consulting firm, has joined Ted Burns in presenting a brief suggesting work on the proposed Revelstoke Dam be halted to provide a bargaining lever that would force renegotiation of the Columbia River Treaty Martin notes:

The economics of dam building are very much in doubt The economics of dam building are very much in doubt today. Their main value is produced during the period of construction when they generate employment and profits. In the past, British Columbia has been living on an economy that can be compared to the life of a dope addict. It has been kept buoyant by a series of shots in the arm.

He points out that the proposed McGregor River Diversion, which will supposedly enhance the generating capacity of Bennett Dam and another proposed dam at Taylor, will

Besides directly affecting the chinook spawning runs in Lower water flows in the Fraser - estimated to be ower much as 20 per cent near Hope by the McGregor dam alone—will increase the pollutant concentration of the river. This, in turn, will have an added harmful effect on salmon utilizing the system and quite likely put a large dent in both sports and commercial catches off the lower coast of British Columbia.

Martin points out that the McGregor is only the first dam in a plan entitled "System E" for the Fraser.

Additional dams are planned between the confluence of the Fraser and McGregor and the town of MoBride as well as on the Caribou and Clearwater, rivers.

Once completed, this scheme would cut off virtually all of the main branches of the Fraser to salmon — mainly chinooks which travel the furthest to spawn.

"We have already lost the Nechako and the Lillooet rivers, so the game of dominoes is heating up and our salmon potential is going down, down, down as each counter falls," says Martin. "The end result is clear if this madness is not stopped."

stopped."

Continuing to flood prime forest-growing sifes, top agriculture land and choice fish-producing areas in the name of short-term economic and political gains is extremely stupid.

Dr. Acara and Burns have come up with a novel method of maximizing benefits to British Columbia in negotiations with the United States over the Columbia River Treaty.

It should be remembered, at this point, that in terms of water discharge the Columbia is second only to the Fraser in They point out that if the Revelstoke Dam is built Canada would be footing most of the bill without achieving much in the way of benefits.

As a lever to bring the Americans to the bargaining table sa lever to bring the Americans to the pargaining table before the Columbia River Treaty expires in 1994, they suggest first, halting construction of the Revelstoke Dam until the treaty has been renegotiated in a satisfactory man-ner and second, threatening to eliminate both the Arrow (Hugh Keenlyside) and Duncan dams in 1994.

"There is little doubt that these positions would lift the Canadian bargaining platform considerably and at least place Canada and British Columbia in a position to recoup some of our lost giveaways in economic terms," they state.

British Columbia has been collecting a mere $16 million per annum since 1964 for the $5.5 million acre-feet of water delivered each year to the U.S.

How would you like to be a shareholder in a company that operated like that? Well, in a way, we all are.

"If the government is so intent on balancing the books and having people pay as they go let them balance their own mistakes first and have the Americans pay as they go," they suggest.

It wouldn't mitigate what has been lost in wildlife and

Bowman Still Fears Czech Club

MONTREAL (CP) — There is no doubt Czechoslovakia's national hockey team will have to play much better to-night against Canada if it hopes to extend the first-ever Canada Cup hockey tour-nament's best-of-three playoff

The Czechs, who defeated Canada 1-0 during the round-robin portion of the tourney, dropped the opening game of the final 6-0 Monday night in

The Canadians jumped into a four-goal lead in the first added two goals in the third.
The game did not feature the crisp passing and swift skating of their earlier tour-nament meeting and although the Czechs had a few threats, their offence was generally unimpressive. "They had some chances," said Bowman. "(Team Canada goalie Rogatien) Vachon had some difficult saves to

The Canadians go into to-night's game with a few nag-ging injuries. Team captain Bobby Clarke twisted his left ankle in Monday's game and missed Tuesday's practice but he is expected to play.

Defenceman Guy Lapointe, who pinched a nerve in the back of his leg Monday night, did not practice, but he is also expected to dress for tonight's contest.

Meanwhile Czech coach Jan Starsi accused Canadian left winger Steve Shutt of blind-siding forward Jiri Novak in the second period, causing Novak to suffer a concussion.

"That's the only way a player like Shutt can check a man like Novak," said Starsi.
"He (Novak) did not have the puck but was struck by the

Coach Fires Kicker

BUFFALO (AP) — Coach Lou Saban of Buffalo Bills, angered by John Leypoldt's three missed field goals in a National Football League game against Miami Dol-phins, fired him and was set today to try out up to a dozen booters. booters.

"Tve had calls from all over the country asking for a chance to take over," Saban said Tuesday night, only hours after he axed Leypoldt, who had kicked 74 three-pointers in his six seasons with the Bills.

"If none of them come through," Saban said. "I'll use Mary Bateman Sunday against Houston."

He said Bateman, the Bills' punter, can kick off and boot field goals.

Leypoldt's first attempt against the Dolphms, a 30-21 winner in Monday night's NFL season-opener, was blocked. He had two other tries, from 39 and 27 yards, and both were wide right. Saban said that if one of the tryouts looked good keep him."

He said most, whose names he declined to reveal, had little experience.

It's tennis on the boom. That the once dilettante sport finally has come of age in this era of multi-million dollar spectaculars and inflated purses was accented dur-ing the last two weeks at the U.S. Open championships.

The 12-day event drew a total of more than 250,000 fans - 30,000 more than ever in its history — and established itself firmly as one of the premier sports attractions of the world.

QUEBEC (CP) - Tougher measures against car users and improved urban transit could cut consumption of fuel for commuter transport by thore than 10 per cent in the next five years, says R. G. Rice, a federal transport department official.

Rice, an urban transit specialist, said in an interview Monday one way to drive car users to mass transit systems is to increase parking prices and reduce parking space.

Combined with operating improvements in urban transit, that would draw people away from the automobile which uses fuel less efficiently than buses and trains.

He said he sees quicker results from such steps than designing cities so that people have shorter trips to work.

The transport department official was chairman of a panel discussing city planning, transport and energy conservation at the annual meeting of the Roads and

Transportation Association of Canada. Canada.

The transport association, which has 950 members from the transport industry, is a research and information organization. It is discussing the problem of energy conservation and transport in its four-day conference which ends Thursday.

Rice disagreed with suggestations.

Rice disagreed with suggestions by some panel members that city planning might lead to substantial energy saving.

COLD SPRING HARBOR, N.Y. (AP)—Smoking low tar and nicotine cigarettes results in lower total death rates in general, as well as lower death rates from both lung cancer and coronary heart disease, the American Cancer

Deaths from lung cancer among smokers of medium tar and nicotine cigarettes were 10 per cent lower than for smokers of high tar and nicotine cigarettes. For smokers of low tar and nicotine cigarettes, the deaths from lung cancer were 26 per cent lower.

Legumes are a good source of protein; however, they are low in one of the essential amino acids — the chemical building blocks of protein. Cereals have this amino acid in abundance. ### Time to Dump Old Food Guide

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

You may have heard a lot of talk recently about Cana-da's Food Guide. The Federal Bureau of Nutritional Sciences in the Department of Health and Welfare gathered together a group of govern-ment nutritionists to discuss changes that should be made in the Food Guide in the Food Guide.

It is time for change. Canada's Food Guide began in 1942 as Canada's Food Rules. We as Canada's Food Rules. We were in the midst of World War I; the government had to ration food yet still maintain the health of Canadians. Following the lead of Britain and the United States, Canada set up its Food Rules. Canada set up its Food Rules to guide the food rationing and to educate the public in eating properly in a time of shortage.

The Food Rules worked. Studies conducted in England showed that the British were better nourished during the war than they have been since. But now it's the 1970's. Our problems are not ones of shortage, but of abundance. More than ever before we need help choosing our foods. The Nutrition Canada Survey proved that.

Canada's Food Guide, as it stands now, classifies foods into five groups, and recom-mends that we eat at least one wing from each group, preferably at every meal. I we do that, we will be eating we do that, we will be eating a balanced diet. That information is quite sound — there's nothing wrong with it; except that, with all the foods on the shelves of supermarkets today, it doesn't tell us enough. We need more information about what we should and shouldn't eat. We need advice to help us deal effectively with our nutrition

Obesity is the number one problem in Canada. Our Food Guide should identify the empty calorie foods that add to our weight, not to our health, Then there's coronary heart disease — the number one killer in Canada. Our Food Guide should tell us more about foods that have excessive amounts of saturated fat or sugar. Next to lung cancer, cancer of the colon is the most prevalent form of cancer, so a Food Guide designed to help meet today's needs should list for us the fibre-containing foods that should be an essential part of our daily diet. And what about all the vitamin pills on the market? Surely we need to know more about vitamin and mineral supplements and excessive amounts of saturatmineral supplements and whether or not we need to take them. That information, too, should be part of our food and there are certain impor-tant changes that should be made. Changes that would benefit us all.

Unfortunately, the government nutritionists have proposed only one change to the Food Guide. They have ignored all our nutrition-related problems, and recommended only that fruits and vegetables two of the five conversions. bles, two of the five groups in our present Food Guide, be amalgamated into one group, as is the case with the Ameri-can Food Guide. For the sake of expediency it was thought this may have advantages: we can use the nutrition education pamphlets and publica-tions produced in the States. But nutritionally it is a step backwards.

When the Nutrition Canada survey was taken, re-searchers found Canadians in all age groups to be low folic acid (one of the B vitamins). We get folic acid from green vegetables. If, as group, chances are we'll eat fruit rather than vegetables, not fruit as well as vegeta bles. Fruit is sweeter. If you're a parent you'll know how difficult it can be to convince your children to eat their vegetables. But you probably don't have that problem with fruit. So, instead of changing the Food Guide to help us, this proposed change will only aggravate an already

There is a grezt deal of po-tential in Canada's Food Guide. We can use it efficient create a healthy, properly nourished society. We should not waste this opportunity to change the Guide. But we should change it in such a way that it can help us.

Before our governments provincial and federal, emthe Food Guide, before they spend millions of dollars pro-moting it, let's stop, think a bit more, and start over

You can help make Canada's Food Guide what it should be. Clip this column and mail it to your Member of Parliament with the words Parliament with the words:
"Pease have Canada's Food Guide help us and help our children eat right." You den't need a stamp, Just write on the envelope "ON HER MA-JESTY'S SERVICE."

If there are any signs of spoilage, such as off odors, froth, foam or mould, do not taste the food. Throw it out immediately, out of the reach spoilage, or animals.

Hang Up Tomatoes

Although home-canned veg-etables may not show any signs of spoilage, it is a wise pregaution to boil them for 10 minutes before tasting.

Canned fruits, jams, jellies, pickles and relishes do not harbor botulism, the health department says, because their high concentrations of acid, salt or sugar prevent the growth of the deadly bacteria.

How do you tell if you have a case of botulism poisoning? The health department says the early symptoms — fa-tigue, weakness and blurred vision — usually develop be-tween eight and 72 hours after eating contaminated food.

These symptoms are followed by labored breathing, difficulty in speaking clearly, dizziness, headaghes, abdominal discomfort, vomiting and muscle paralysis.

Getting to know the basics of life insurance need not be dull. The 40-page booklet "That's Life" is a light hearted explanation of what life insurance is all about.

The text was designed to provide high school students with basic information; but it is enjoyable reading for people of all ages

The booklet mentions, for example, that the average Canadian family now has more than $25,000 worth of life insurance, and that residents of Ontario own about three times as much insurance per capita as families in Newfoundland.

You will also learn that on this continent, the first life insurance plan was offered in 1759 to Presbyterian ministers only. Other men in North America could not avail them-selves of the benefits of Life Insurance until a British company established an office in Philadelphia in 1807. Only much later were women allowed to purchase life insur-

High Fiber Diet Open to Question

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D. Do you have any comments about the value of the high fiber diet that is so popular?

— Mrs. B.F.

The roughage, or high fiber, diet is a radical departure from past medical thinking.

In recent years, doctors have given greater consider-high roughage diet may play an important role in reducing the frequency of cancer of the bowel. Peptic ulcers, diver-ticulitis and chronic constipation may also become less prevalent with a high fiber

At the present time, there is a shift to increasing roughage in our foods in an effort to reduce the gastro-intestinal Reuben apparently explored before writing his book.

Scientists and physicians from all over the world have contributed significant studies and articles which seem to point to the validity of Dr. Reuben's conclusion.

Dr. Reuben maintains that these scientists found that there is "a relationship between the epidemic of degenreative diseases and the diet of modern, urban men and women. What they discovered was a shocking indictment of current nutritional practices."

Dr. Reuben states that "modern diets are glaringly deficient in that single substance, fiber (or roughage), that is very likely related to a long and disease-free life.

"Affluent Americans," says, "are eating a high-priced, high-prestige diet that leads them directly to cancer of the colon, heart attacks, obesity and hypertension."

I am not writing this colthe fiber diet is guaranteed to prevent all the ills of man. Rather, I want to call attention to some potential possibilities that formerly may have been overlooked.

What is a high roughage diet? In essence, it includes whole grain cereal products, high fiber fruits and vegetables, nuts and seeds. Finely made from whole grain rye flour, whole wheat flour, soy flour, whole grain corn meal or grain buckwheat flour. Dr. Reuben says that the simplest fiber dally requirement is to use unprocessed miller's bran, taking two teaspoonsful in a full glass of water each day before meals. Or, the processed flour products, re-fined sugars and low rough-age foods contribute nothing to this new food concept.

Notes on Merrie Melodies and Looney Tunes-or, did you ever consider a Bugs Bunny cartoon as Art, or an Elmer Fudd-Daffy Duck episode as a cultural artifact? Prompted by an upcoming lecture (Thursday, 8 p.m., SUB, University of Victoria campus) on the growth and character of the Hollywood cartoon, by Greg Ford, a noted authority on American animation. here are a few thoughts on the subject:

Cartoon animation can be defined in various ways-for instance, The Oxford Companion to Film describes it as a film "which is created frame by frame", or "that which is created by filming drawings in sequence to create the illusion of a moving picture." If you are thinking more about what you really see in a cartoon, you might moving images which cele-brate the enormous range of physical expression; images which shift easily from fantasy to reality, from subtlety-to exaggeration, from grace to total anarchy; images which stretch every aspect of our imaginative powers. Animated film has been around since 1909, when Gertie the Dinosaur, a creation of Windsor McCoy, stretched her neck, bobbed her head around looking for something to eat, and found her creator under a leaf. Since the 1930's, the American cinema has seen the development of two distinct styles of animation for the theatrical cartoon short, that cartoon moment that sees you in and out of the theatre, or primes you for the feature.

There was the Disney school, which has been recog-nized and applauded perhaps nized and applauded perhaps more than it deserves, and there was another school, which, for want of a better name, has been called the Tex Avery school (he was the creator of Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck), and which until very recently has been noticeably ignored by critics and film historians. Disney and Avery were complementary and contrasting figures. Although they learned and borrowed from each other they focussed on different authey focussed on different au-diences, and developed very different philophies of animated comedy.

Disney's animation was characterized by sweetness and light. His characters, human types in animal disguise, were representative of Disney was interested in the child and in appealing to "the child in all of us." He wanted his animation to convey a sense of folk-tale and a feel-ing of timelessness. His art expressed the instincts of a man bent on creating instant

The Avery school, which included Frank Tashlin, Chuck Jones and Friz Feleng, however, knew that the cartoons they made were ging to be seen by as many adults as kids, so they turned their gags and plots on such adults status.

At times, the cartoon world of Avery, Jones and Feleng has been criticized for its "pure, mindless violence". Its critics have drawn distinctions between the films of the Avery school and the "nonacters like Mr. Magoo and Gerald McBoing Boing, though it's difficult to see the differences.

Mr. Magoo, for instance, hits, stomps on, and twists bodies about in the same way that Bugs has done but admit-tedly, Magoo's actions are less "real" than those of Daffy or Elmer Fudd.

Avery and his friends made films that were full of observations about society, that were detailed, creative and visually exciting. They were animated ventures in the surreal that paid off in a high degree of amusement. That they were sophisticated, and at times, anarchistic, screening for contemporary shouldn't preclude their audiences. Appreciating the fantastic doesn't necessitate having to imitate it.

Shows Offer Something for All

table shows are being brought to the notice of non-gardeners and gardeners. The ultimate effects reach all segments of our communities. Why? Be-cause all of us eat fruits and regetables, and almost as many find plesure in the color, form and variety color, form and variety among the flowers.

This means that a visit to three or four shows each season is money well spent (four show admissions for an adult cost a total of two dollars; children accompanied by adults admitted free). In' some instances the children, particularly in the age group of 7 to 14, get more from the visit than the grownups, for the reason that seeing the exhibits on the tables apart frm a garden setting bring many quesions, as they look different to a super market display. Yet they are all edible and such things are attractive to growing minds.

Another point of interest is that apples and other items have names, family names you might say, according to their parentage. It is this special name which applies only to one variety of apple, that makes it possible for anyone to grow exactly the same kind of fruit. She said Tuesday the first meeting will be a sort of screening session. The course will operate something like a night school course, with students having "homework" during the week.

Viking 2 Area Has Less Oxygen

PASADENA (UPI) — Viking 2 scientists, still trying to free the spacecraft's jammed toil scooper, have discovered a difference between its landing ground and the distant site where Viking 1 put down.

There is less oxygen in the soil sampled by Viking 2 than in the soil around Viking 1. "We see oxygen, but less than at Viking 1, which may suggest less oxidyzing substances at the Viking 2 site," Dr. Hal Klein said after reviewing results of the gas exchange one of three biology.

SECRET SWEDISH DEAL FOR U.S. BUG DEVICES

By BERNARD NOSSITER payments channeled by Sweden to U.S. Air Force intelligence over several years are being used to purchase electronic devices that enable Stockholm to listen in on military traffic in the Soviet bloc.

According to informed sources here, the payments were hidden because of neu-tral Sweden's delicate rela-tions with its Baltic neighbors and because some Swedish opinion would be horrified by any classified deal with the Pentagon.

Diplomats here are convinced that at least some of what Sweden learns through its monitoring devices is filtered back to the Pentagon. Swedish officials decline to confirm this, presumably be-cause that would be too naked a breach of neutrality. The effectiveness of the American-supported system was demonstrated last November, when the Defence Radio Authority, the user agency here, picked up messages sent by Moscow to Soviets between the support of the state of the support of the support et bombers pursuing a run-away Soviet frigate.

Salter declined to identify the "areas of agreement," But union sources said these included fringe benefits, pen-

"They will be presented to the employers tomorrow," Slater said, "in the hope that a satisfactory settlement can be reached that will be ac-

The union, which represents Britain's 38,000 merchant sea men, ordered a nationwide walkout last weekend to back its demand for a $10.80 week-

After more than 12 hours of negotiations with trades union congress leaders, the day it had agreed to postpone the planned strike for 15 days to give time for new talks.

Canada's Bureaucrats and Politicians Don't All Match American Pay Scales

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA - While Canada's leading bankers and the C. D. Howe Institute are blaming increased government spending for contributing to the inflation rate, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and his entourage have moved into spacious new offices, about 500 yards away from his quarters on Pariament Hill.

MPs such as Tom Cossitt (PC-Leeds) and former prime minister John Diefenbaker minister John Diefenbaker have accused Trudeau of liv as if he's trying to live in presidential style, the prime minister falls considerably

Canada's population is about one-tenth that of the U.S. But that ratio doesn't apply to the pay and privileges of cabinet ministers, le-gislators, the judiciary and se-

Cabinet ministers in Wash-ington make $63,000 a year. Their Ottawa counterparts make $44,000. But deputy ministers, under secretaries and other senior bureaucrats in the U.S. are paid between $44,625 and $36,000 while Canada's top civil servants make $60,000 to $66,000.

Bouey's Pay Tops

Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, whose new $40 million office building is going up a block away from Trudeau's new quarters on Wellington Street, gets a sal-ary of $75,000. U.S. Vice Pres-ident Nelson Rockefeller's salident Nelson Rockefeller's salary is only $65,625, but he gets a taxable expense allowance of $10,000 as well.

Members of Congress—the Senate and House of Representatives—in Washington sentatives—in make $44,600.

Just before Christmas of 1974, Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp, pro-claiming that it was "one of the most distasteful tasks" of his career, proposed raising MPs salaries and allowances to $39,000. The public outcry which persuaded him to lower the pay proposal to a range of $34,600 to $38,374, and the Diefenbaker recalls that it cost about $50,000 a year to operate the prime minister's office in his day. Under Lester Pearson the bill was $75,000. On Trudeau's first had risen to $1.3 million. It is expected to rise to $2 million this year. There are 95 people in the PMO today: the prime minister says he needs them to answer his mail.

Two members of the prime minister's office are paid between $54,000 and $66,000, and eight more are in the $35,000-$47,000 salary range. In October of last year, 1,260 civil servants were making more than $27,500 a year and 4.425 were being paid over-time as well — 206 of them more than $5,000 in one year.

In one year the government spends about $134,000 on cars and chaffeurs for deputy ministers, though some are used for inter-departmental messenger services. In 1974-75 the energy department alone spent $20,033 for this purpose. External affairs runs 102 cles abroad at a cost of $1.2

Pulp Wages Rocket 87%

Wages in the Canadian pulp and paper industry have risen 87 per cent since 1969 and are 16 per cent above those paid in the United States, according to a report released in Vancovuer today.

The report by the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, released at the start of its anaual convention, showed average hourly mill wages at 6.83 in Canada compared with 5.89 in the U.S.

"Since this is not justified on the basis of productivity, it represents a substantial disadvantage for Canadian pulp and paper manufacturers, competing both at home and around the world," the association said.

In 1969, wages in the two countreis were about even,

$3.66 per hour in Canada and $3.67 in the United States.
Since then, Canadian wages have gone up 87 per cent while U.S. wages were going up 60 per cent. The Canadian association said unless the wage gap is corrected, Canadian mills may find it difficult to attract capital to reinvest in job-creating expansion programs. The report showed that despite heavy U.S. investment in the industry, Canadians continue to control about 60 per cent of production.

President Ford, of course, is head of state, but even when the salary of Governor General Jules Leger $49,000—is added to Trudeau's, Canadians can be seen to get off lightly compared to American taxpayers. And they get the Queen for nothing except when she's in the country.

Trudeau is blamed personally by the opposition for giving the lead in high spendhe had to pay an annual $5,000 rent for 24 Sussex Drive.

He says that he didn't have two $80,000 armoured limousines at his disposal like Trudeau, and had to supply his own cars with a $2,000 annual allowance like all other members of cabinet.

Diefenbaker claims that he could operate 24 Sussex Drive for "a few hundred dollars" a year and that total expenses for Harrington Lake, the summer retreat acquired when he was prime minister, were was prime mini about $50 a year.

Since Trudeau became prime minister in 1968, the public works department alone has spent $403,048 reno-vating and refurnishing his offices and gesidences $268,503 at 24 Sussex Drive, $25,561 at Harrington Lake, $87,745 on the Centre Block of-Block office. Diefenbaker recalls that it cost about $50,000 a year to operate the prime minister's office in his day. Under Lester Pearson the bill was $75,000. On Trudeau's first year in office, the cost jumped to $406,000 and in 1972 had risen to $1.3 million. It is expected to rise to $2 million this year. There are 95 people in the PMO today: the prime minister says he needs them to answer his mail.

Two members of the prime minister's office are paid be-tween $54,000 and $66,000, and eight more are in the $35,000-$47,000 salary range. In October of last year, 1,260 4.425 were being paid over-time as well — 206 of them more than $5,000 in one year.
